A mild winter and warm spring has more people outside and active — and they have company. Ticks, mosquitoes and other insects are active earlier this year due to unseasonably warm weather and medical professionals are advising people to be cautious of themselves and their pets.

But most pests are just, well, pesky. Only the black-legged ticks species carries lyme disease and it is rare in Kentucky. More cases are reported in Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota and the northeast. There are some cases reported in Kentucky every year, including five confirmed cases in 2010, the most recent data available from the Centers for Disease Control. Safe is better than sorry, though, according to Dr. Ann Roberts, who practices family medicine at Baptist Medical Associates in La Grange. “Prevention is always the best,”

she said. Roberts advises wearing long pants and boots above the ankle — while wearing shorts might be cooler, she said shorts allow ticks to climb higher, finding hiding spots on a person’s torso. It takes at least four hours of attachment to transmit lyme disease, Roberts said, although most cases take 48 hours to transmit. Early symptoms of lyme disease include a bulls-eye rash around the bite site, but not all people get the rash. Roberts said flu-like

Baptist Healthcare enters negotiations to operate Oldham EMS

BY TRACY HARRIS
STAFF WRITER, THE OLDHAM ERA

Oldham County EMS board members voted Monday to formalize a contract with Baptist Health Affiliates, Inc. to outsource OCEMS management duties. Officials hope the change will alleviate financial concerns but say residents should not notice a decrease in care. Baptist Health Affiliates is part of the Baptist Healthcare system, which also operates Baptist Hospital Northeast in La Grange. Five responses to an April request for proposal were received and reviewed by a team of six evaluators. Evaluators agreed Baptist is the best fit to manage OCEMS — what board member and county CFO Stan Clark calls the “most advantageous” solution, not necessarily the least expensive. The evaluators included Bill Kramer, a consultant working with the county’s fire services task force; Joseph Schiess, a former Louisville paramedic; Gary Yurt, former chief of Worthington Fire Department; David Such, a UPS executive and member of the task force; Rob Houchens, a certified public accountant and task force member; and Teresa Gamsky, director of the Oldham County Health Department, Clark said. The proposal submitted by Baptist says all employees will be retained at or

Residents petition for special election to expand liquor sales

Officials say liquor stores could expand tourism, local revenue

BY TRACY HARRIS
STAFF WRITER, THE OLDHAM ERA

Alcohol sales in La Grange could expand, depending on the outcome of a special election this summer. More than 400 people signed a petition requesting the special election, which will allow La Grange voters to decide if they want to make the city “wet.” The special election is set for July 24.

The proposed change would make La Grange a wet city, but as a fourth-class city, that comes with provisions, according to Kim Buckler, executive director of the Oldham County Tourism Commission. She added that sales of liquor by the drink in restaurants would not change. Under current regulations throughout Oldham County, restaurants must have at least 100 seats and make 70 percent of sales from food to sell liquor. But, beer-only and wine-only permits would be available to restaurants with different restrictions than the current policy. Beer could be served in restaurants of any size without food-to-liquor requirements. Another permit would allow restaurants with at least 50 seats to serve wine, and require restaurants to make half their sales from food. The change would also allow up to three package liquor stores to open in La Grange, subject to state alcohol beverage control approval. Buckler said other attractions could open because of the change, like tasting rooms for local wineries. “We’re doing it for tourism,” she said. “It’ll make it nicer for the people who come here.” Buckler said she focused on La Grange because it is where all the hotels are and because of the fourth-class city provisions that allow more control over alcohol sales. La Grange Mayor Bill Lammlein said the built-in protections make the change

History center to host archaeology investigation May 26

The Oldham County History Center will host an archaeology investigation under the direction of archaeologist Jeannine Kreinbrink. This is a continuing investigation at the Gatewood Plantation located outside of Bedford in Trimble County.

The Gatewood Plantation was the last place where Henry Bibb was a slave before he gained freedom by escaping north and moving to Ipswich, Canada, where he became the first black editor of a Canadian newspaper.

Throughout Bibb's struggles to overcome slavery, he became well-educated and made many contacts throughout the United States.

Although he died before the Civil War, he has been cited by abolitionists Harriet Beecher Stowe and Fredric Douglas as someone who influenced their thinking. It is hoped artifacts and information will be found at the archaeological site which documents Bibb's narratives which can be accessed at DocSouth.unc.edu/neh/bibb/bibb.html.

This investigation is part of an ongoing program to document the artifacts and information of the Gatewood Site. To date, there have been 15 different investigations at the site involving schools, the general public, historical society members and teens who participated in summer workshops.

The dig will take place from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. May 26, 2012. Children age 13 and up are welcome with the company of an adult. Participation is free but reservations are required. For information, call 222-0826.

Fifth-grade teacher honored for dedication to students, keen interest in their success

Goshen Elementary students welcomed visitors to their school May 9 to honor a fifth-grade teacher as one of this year's ExCel award winners.

Ruthie Parrott is one of 13 teachers to receive the award, given by WHAS-11 television and Louisville Gas & Electric/Kentucky Utilities.

Parrott, a graduate of South Oldham High School, began teaching at Goshen in 2005.

The ExCel awards honor teachers for classroom excellence and educational leadership.

Gary Roedemeier, WHAS-11 reporter, told Parrott it was her day to shine in the spotlight.

"We're here to honor that person, who in a great educational community in Oldham County, has been chosen as the one person — the one teacher — who exemplifies excellence in our public school system," Roedemeier said.

Parrott's innovative teaching strategies previously caught the school officials' attention — her class is used as the district's lab class.

Her students are often found hard at work with no shoes on, sitting on exercise balls.

Principal Lisa Peters said it may be unconventional, but it works.

"It's organized and meaningful playfulness," she said. "It looks chaotic but there is intense learning going on."

Parrott's contributions outside the school also received high praise from her colleagues and the award committee.

Before each school year begins, Parrott schedules an in-home visit with each of her students. She said

Champion runner visits South Oldham

Kenya native Wesley Korir is a London Olympics hopeful

BY TRACY HARRIS
STAFF WRITER, THE OLDHAM ERA

It's not every day a marathon champion shows up at your school.

But students at South Oldham Middle had the rare opportunity to meet an elite — and likely London Olympian — runner May 10.

Wesley Korir, 29, won the Boston Marathon in April, coming from behind late in the race to win by 26 seconds.

Now, the University of Louisville graduate is back in Kentucky and shared his story with several classes at SOMS, where his former U of L teammate Andrew Hackney is a health teacher.

Korir is highly regarded for his extensive charitable work in Kenya, his native country.

His charity, the Kenyan Kids Foundation, sponsors children to attend school.

"I want to send as many children to school as I can," he said, telling students it only cost $1 per day to fund a Kenyan's education.

He is also helping build a hospital in his hometown.

His younger brother died from an untreated snakebite because the nearest hospital was 20 miles away and the only transportation was by bus.

Korir lived in Kenya until he enrolled at Murray State University at age 18. He transferred to U of L a semester later.

He told students that as a child, he wasn't always sure if he would eat that day and that he ran 20 miles a day to travel to school.

Students were visibly shocked to hear he had never worn shoes until age 15, and didn't know computers existed until he arrived in the United States.

In fact, he said he missed his plane to America because he couldn't figure out the escalators in the airport, then couldn't open his hotel room door because he had never seen a card key.

But his upbringing never stopped him from dreaming, he said, asking students about their futures.

At U of L, Korir studied biology as part of a pre-med program — he wanted to be a doctor.

prosecuting sex offenders and has been involved in a variety of criminal cases, including murder cases and a number of jury trials.

Baxter gained administrative experience managing the county attorney's office in 2010 after being appointed to fill the remainder of the late John Fendley's term.

Shaughnessy said while he has not prosecuted a case, he has tried a number of personal injury and criminal defense cases.

Shaughnessy cited his experience as counsel for Brent Burke, the Army sergeant charged with murdering his estranged wife and her former mother-in-law in 2007.

Shaughnessy joined the defense team for the fourth and last of Burke's four civilian trials. All four resulted in mistrials, two because of hung juries — including the one Shaughnessy defended. A military panel convicted Burke on murder charges May 9.

Carter is Shaughnessy's stepfather and they practice law together, including representing Burke.

Two seek GOP nod for state representative; will face incumbent Rick Rand in the fall

Republicans will also vote on a candidate for state representative in the 47th district, choosing between T.K. Broecker and Charity Wolf-Edmonston.

Democratic incumbent Rick Rand is running uncontested.

Broecker emphasizes his business experience and said it is time for the legislature to change and make Kentucky a better place to live.

He said it is time for the legislature to adapt, and said nothing has changed since he ran against Rand two years ago.

Wolf-Edmonston said she has committed herself to renewing the American spirit for younger generations. She said she would support educational reform and that there is no economic or job growth without an educated workforce.

symptoms, including a fever and body aches, are warning signs.

If a tick does attach,

Roberts said not to dispose of it — it can be tested for Lyme disease.

Roberts advises making daily body checks a habit.

Daily checks are good for pets, too, said Tanya Turner, owner of Hand-in-Paw Safety, a pet store in La Grange. Ear folds, legs and armpit areas are common hiding places.

Turner said pets don't need to be in wooded areas to pick up ticks — they're in yards, too.

Flea collars and medications also help,

Pets don't need to be in wooded areas to pick up ticks — they're in yards, too.

and Turner said there are natural products available for pets allergic to other chemical repellants.

Goshen Animal Clinic staff are seeing a lot more ticks already, according to David Dunbar, the hospital administrator. The clinic has a sign out front warning about ticks and information on its website.

For example, Dunbar said, a client recently brought her dog to the clinic. The dog stays indoors but had picked up two ticks just in the time it took to walk to the car.

Ticks, including the dog tick and lone-star tick, both common in Kentucky, can also carry Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever.

Like Lyme disease, a tick must be attached for four to six hours for transmission. Symptoms are similar and include a rash and high fever. There are about 10-30 cases of Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever reported in Kentucky each year.

Dog ticks and lone-star ticks are larger species, about the size of a pencil eraser. Black-legged ticks are smaller, about the size of the head of a pin.

The CDC recommends removing ticks with a pair of fine-tipped tweezers, gripping the tick as close to the skin as possible. Pull straight up with steady pressure, as twisting or jerky can cause the mouth parts to break off and remain lodged in the skin.

But, he said he knows there will always be some people against any liquor sales in the county.

Crestwood resident Patti Stephens is concerned.

She worries that making La Grange a wet city will be the first step, leading to bars, increased crime and unsafe situations.

"I'm looking at it as an economic boost for our city."

La Grange Mayor Bill Lammlein, who supports expanded liquor sales

"People move to Oldham County to put their children in good schools and raise their children in a safe place," she said.

The proposed changes would not permit bars.

Lammlein believes more people would use La Grange as their one-stop-shop if the city had package liquor stores.

That goes for Henry and Trimble residents, too, he said. Now, those people stop in Jefferson County to pick up beer and wine — and while they're there, they do their grocery and other shopping, too.

"I'm looking at it as an economic boost for our city," he said.

above their current salaries, as long as they meet standard hiring conditions like a background check.

Board member Stan Clark, also the county's CFO, said Baptist will also offer some benefits above what employees currently have, including matching retirement contributions and providing disability coverage.

Baptist was the only not-for-profit organization to submit a proposal, which Clark said works well with OCEMS's own tax-exempt status.

Training will continue for community members and first responders, who provide assistance and backup to OCEMS.

OCEMS will also continue to station an ambulance in North Oldham and will continue using existing Oldham County Dispatch services.

Baptist currently operates another ambulance company, Mercy Regional EMS, in Paducah.

Mercy Regional EMS handles about 13,000 service calls per year — about three times more than OCEMS.

To cut costs, the Oldham County Ambulance Taxing District consolidated its fleet of vehicles in 2011.

nies, Yellow Ambulance and American Medical Response, were asked to keep their proposals open in case a deal cannot be struck with Baptist.

The remaining two proposals, from Rural/Metro Ambulance and Medic-1 Ambulance, were rejected. Clark said all five proposals were impressive, but the other three seemed a better fit for the county.

The Oldham County Ambulance Taxing District will retain control of the agency and ownership of facilities and equipment.

The change will remove employees from the state's hazardous duty retirement plan. Clark said the hazardous duty plan will cost OCEMS $650,000 this year.

The taxing district is managed by a three-member board, including

Tom Clark, a Crestwood dentist and a third position remains vacant.

According to Baptist spokesperson Kit Fullenlove, Baptist Hospital Northeast officials are excited about the opportunity.

"We are eager to sit down and negotiate a contract which is beneficial to all parties, and provides a quality ambulance service to the people of Oldham County," she said.

The board hopes to wrap up negotiations quickly, including having Baptist meet with employees later this month and a special meeting to finalize the contract by Memorial Day.

If approved, Baptist would take control of operations July 1.

she can learn a lot about students and their families during that visit.

Parrott continues that relationship by attending at least one extracurricular event for each student during the school year.

As an ExCel award recipient, Parrott received a golden apple trophy — which she jokingly kissed during the ceremony — and $1,000 from LG&E/KU.

She will also attend a black-tie banquet with other winners in September.

Oldham County Judge-Executive David Voegele proclaimed May 8 as “Excellence in teaching and Ruthie Parrott” day.

“This will be Mrs. Parrott Day today and forever in Oldham County, he said, eliciting “Ohhhhs” from envious students.

Will Wells, incoming superintendent, also presented a commendation from State Rep. David Osborne and Speaker of the House Greg Stumbo.

Wells said he was honored to present the award because he has noticed Parrott’s dedication since meeting her several years ago during a leadership program.

“I’ve long been impressed with her and her drive to be excellent in all that she does,” he said.

The celebration ended with two musical performances.

Former student Jennifer Stekardis played Katy Perry’s “Fireworks” on the piano in Parrott’s honor.

Then, Parrott’s current students danced flash mob-style while two students, Emma Fawbush and Makena Brown, sang their own lyrics about Parrott to the tune of Hot Chelle Ray’s “Tonight, Tonight.”

The song included praise for Parrott’s smiles and laughter — and her penchant for Diet Coke.

Her husband, Richard, and son, Anderson, attended the presentation, along with her parents.

She attended Georgetown College, where she earned her undergraduate degree in 2003, and the University of Louisville, where she earned her master’s degree in 2005.

Parrott also received a 2012 Pyramid Award from the Oldham County Educational Foundation as part of a group. Parrott and the school’s other fifth-grade teachers created a cookbook to help students apply decimal and fraction skills. Proceeds from selling the cookbook were donated to charity.

Parrott credits her colleagues and students for making her a better teacher.

“All of you guys are amazing,” she said. “Goshen wouldn’t be the amazing school that it is without every single one of you guys sitting out there.”

But after becoming a three-time All-American and placing third in the NCAA national championship meet in 2007, Korir decided to try running professionally.

He first tackled the marathon in 2008 at Chicago and was denied entry into the elite field.

“That man looked me in the eye and said I was too slow,” Korir said. “And I told him he could not determine my future for me.”

Korir told students about how he started five minutes behind the elite field, giving those men a mile-long head start.

And Korir caught them.

At that race, he overcame starting from the back to place fourth, securing his place in the elite field from then on.

Not only did he prove officials wrong at that race, Korir told students they offered him an appearance fee to return to the race last year.

He ran a 2:06:15 that day, placing fourth.

Korir used his running experiences as a way to show students they can overcome challenges in their own lives.

U of L graduate Wesley Korir won the Boston Marathon and hopes to compete in the London Olympics.

And, he said, they should feel blessed for all the things they do have, because many people in Kenya are not so fortunate.

Korir is currently hoping to make the Olympic team to run the 10,000-meter race in London for Kenya — although he said if his American citizenship is finalized in time, he’ll compete for the United States.

The U.S. will hold its track and field Olympic Trials races in June. Kenya chooses its athletes via a committee selection.

Korir’s wife, Tarah, who also ran for U of L, is hoping to make the team for Canada, her home country.

OTHERS COME FIRST

When I was in the seminary, we were required to have a spiritual director – someone to talk to, someone to keep us on track. My spiritual director was someone I spent hours talking to and sharing my inner life.

One day he told me a phrase I will never forget: “Our swollen concern for ourselves constitutes the worst threat in life.”

He was right. And the teachings of any religion bear him out.

Repeatedly we are told ego or self-will, our drive to be separate from the wholeness of creation, is the source of all our suffering. It keeps us from accepting others, from sympathy and quick understanding. More than that, it alienates us from the supreme reality we call God.

Puffed up by our ego, we look out at the world through the distorting medium of our likes and dislikes, hope and fears, opinions and judgments. We want everyone to behave as we think they should – the right way. When, naturally enough, they not only behave their own way but expect us to do as they do, we get agitated. And what we see through this agitation makes up our everyday reality.

It is only by giving up this attempt to put ourselves first that we can find what we really want – peace of mind, lasting relationships, love.

Do you remember the children’s game “King of the Mountain” – scrambling up the sand pile, pulling and pushing each other to get on top? That may be all right when we are 7, but when we are 30 — or 60? By the time we become adults, we should begin to think of leaving these scrambling games behind.

Years ago I spoke to a group girls at Assumption High School, where I served as chaplain.

After my talk I answered questions, and the girl who presided asked, “You’ve used the word love many times. What does love mean to you?”

I told her: “When your boyfriend’s welfare means more to you than your own, you are in love.” This girl turned to the rest of the gathering and said candidly, “Well, I guess none of us have ever been in love.”

I think that can be said for most people. But we can learn to be in love. The spiritual life is marvelously fair, for it is open to everybody. There is no favoritism and no heredity class. No matter where you start, you can learn everything you need to learn, provided you are prepared to work at it. So too of love. We may be very self-willed now, but why should we be depressed about it? We can begin the work of eradicating our self-will, and the easiest and most natural way is by putting the welfare of those around us first.

In a sense, it comes down to attention. When we are preoccupied with ourselves, we cannot help becoming insensitive to others’ needs. We can pay attention only to so much, and all our attention rests on ourselves. When we turn away from ourselves, even if only a little, we begin to see what is really best for those we love.

Today’s world especially needs all men and women to rise about their egos and their separateness to become universal, on fire with love for all. My plea is that none of us cease striving until we reach this unitary consciousness, when we live in the certitude that all life is one and that whatever we do has an effect, for good or ill, everywhere.

This is the realization that the poet John Donne conveys in these haunting lines:

“Any man’s death diminishes me, because I am involved in mankind.
And therefore never send to know for whom the bell tolls; it tolls for thee.”

COLUMN

FROM SWEAT-FREE TO SWEAT HOG

The glorious, perspiration-free years of choosing deodorant based on scent have passed

This morning I noticed that my deodorant claims, “Extra responsive in emotional moments releasing sweat.”

I’ve never been much of a sweater.

I don’t mean a fuzzy upper-torso garment, although, I’m not that either.

But if I was that kind of sweater, I like to think I’d be a Cashmere twin set, rather than an argyle pullover or wool turtleneck.

On some days I feel like a Christmas sweater – slightly gaudy, over-sized and ill-matched to anything else in the closet.

When hubby and I first met, he didn’t really believe me when I told him I never sweat. He thought I was just being demure; as if demure young ladies sit around discussing their sweat glands.

My teenage daughter is so demure she doesn’t even like to say armpit.

She prefers the proper term, axilla.

Over the years, hubby came to realize that I truly was a freak of nature.

Regardless of my activity level, how intense the moment, or how high the temperature, I never broke a sweat.

During those wonderful,

GINGER TRUITT
guest columnist

perspiration-free years, I chose deodorant based on fragrance.

It didn’t matter if it contained an antiperspirant, or if it claimed to be strong enough for a man but made for a woman.

Incidentally, that claim was true.

My rough, tough, brick-layer, auto mechanic dad used my mom’s deodorant for years because it was so effective.

Don’t tell him I told you — it’s a “Secret.”

I was perfectly content with my underactive sweat glands, and then everything changed.

I don’t know if I should blame it on my geriatric pregnancies – that’s what they call it when you have a baby after the age of 35 – or if something in my body just finally kicked in.

In the past couple of years, I have gone from sweat-free to sweat-hog. I doubt if Vinnie Barbarino and Arnold Horshack ever suffered the way I do.

Now, I sweat more in a week than I did during the entire first 40 years of my life.

When I initially noticed underarm perspiration marks on my T-shirt, I thought I had leaned across something wet.

I couldn’t figure it out.

Next thing I knew, my shirt was sticking to my back.

My back!

I had a sweaty back, and I’d done nothing more than fold laundry.

I started reading deodorant labels, making sure they contained an antiperspirant, and eventually, I discovered “clinical strength.”

I didn’t even care if it smelled like tulips or ocean water.

Back in high school, I worked down at the Piggly-Wiggly supermarket.

There was a heavy-set woman who would come in on those hot, Tennessee summer days, wearing a tank top and followed by a passel of unruly children.

As she corralled the kids through my checkout line, I picked up a jar of Tussy cream deodorant and turned it over, looking for a tag.

I told the sack boy I needed a price check, and the customer raised her arm to point in the direction of the hygiene aisle.

It was then that I saw the shocking shock of hair flourishing in her axilla.

The aroma emanating from the thick, black pelt, matted with white Tussy cream, was remarkably...pleasant!

Tussy deodorant is hard to find, and I’m not willing to pay extra to purchase it online.

So, I guess I’ll keep using my wimpy,

“clinical strength” antiperspirant and hope for the best.

If I find myself in an emotional moment that releases sweat, perhaps I’ll cover the evidence with a nice wool sweater.

2012 PRIMARY ELECTION

Four seek circuit clerk's position

BY JACQUELYN HACK
EDITOR, THE OLDHAM ERA

The four Republican candidates for Oldham circuit court clerk all have one thing in common – a lengthy career in various public service roles.

In recent weeks, the candidates, Steve Greenwell, Steve Kaelin, Suzette Kimbell and Rick Rash, have participated in two candidate forums in order to meet voters.

Some of the most interested voters are those who currently work in the Oldham County courthouse.

During a candidate forum May 9 at the South Oldham Fire Department, much of the audience included current and retired courthouse staffers.

The current circuit court clerk, Lynn Mason, will retire at the end of the year.

She took office in 1994. Each Kentucky county has a circuit court clerk that manages the records of the circuit and district courts.

The clerk also issues driver's licenses, non-driver identification cards and oversees other court-related matters.

The Oldham County Circuit Court Clerk's office is staffed with 17 people.

Some questions during the forum May 9 focused on leadership and management of the circuit clerk's office.

Greenwell emphasizes his three terms as a magistrate, his life-long residency in Oldham County and his work ethic.

In a typical week, he works 25 hours driving a bus for Oldham County Schools and works 35 hours farming, in addition to his duties as magistrate.

He has been a farmer for 36 years, managing 10 people. Greenwell said he knows how to work peoples' strengths and place them in roles where they will excel.

Greenwell is currently in his 10th year as District 4 magistrate on Oldham County Fiscal Court and has never missed a meeting. Fiscal court meets twice a month.

Kaelin, a retired police officer, said his career has centered on the court and criminal justice systems. He said to offset low pay for employees in the circuit court clerk's office, the circuit clerk must show he or she is the hardest working

Greenwell

Kaelin

Kimbell

person in the building.

Pay for employees in the clerk's office is designated by the state administrative office of the courts.

Kaelin said he has the experience and determination to provide efficiency and customer service. As a police sergeant, he learned the importance of gaining the respect of his team and building an open, honest atmosphere.

Kimbell said she has experience as a deputy clerk and family court employee – jobs she took after owning her own business and working as a substitute teacher.

She said leading the clerk's office is about respect.

Being courteous and respectful to fellow employees is a habit that carries over to the way the public is treated, Kimbell said.

Now is a crucial time for circuit clerks' offices throughout the state, Kimbell said, as many clerks – including those in Henry and Trimble counties – now plan to retire.

While the position isn't about policy-setting, she said, it is important to be present in the clerk's office to serve as a backup for staff members and to lead by example.

Kaelin and Kimbell recently left their jobs in the clerk's office in order to run for the position.

Rash said he wants to continue his record of public service, including four terms as a magistrate.

He said his leadership experience also comes from running a wholesale wallpaper business that quickly grew from zero to 13 employees.

Rash said he wants the circuit court clerk's office to be more accessible, including evening hours every Thursday.

Rash said if elected, he wants to be more effective in lobbying the state legislature, because sooner or later, the state must change the way it makes money.

Other candidates disagreed, and said being present in the clerk's office to manage day-to-day operations is of utmost importance.

The candidates also discussed effective management under the state's merit system, how to offset budgetary constraints, handling conflict among employees and a move toward digital record-keeping.

JACQUELYN HACK/THE OLDHAM ERA

La Grange attorneys Steve Emery and Rob Riley at a forum for Oldham circuit court clerk candidates May 9 at the South Oldham Fire Department. Riley served as moderator.

DUTIES OF A COUNTY'S CIRCUIT COURT CLERK

Circuit court clerks are responsible for managing the records of Circuit and District courts, Kentucky trial courts.

They have offices in all 120 Kentucky counties and are elected for six-year terms.

Circuit court clerks provide professional record-keeping, receive money due the courts, pay money to required parties and to the state, record legal documents, provide legal documents and other legal materials, maintain the jury system, administer oaths, handle affidavits, and issue driver licenses and non-driver ID cards.

The Kentucky Association of Circuit Court Clerks celebrated its 100th anniversary in 2005.

In 1992, the KACCC created Trust For Life – the first such program in the country – which allows every person obtaining a Kentucky driver license to donate $1 to promote organ and tissue donation.

Annual sculpture show opens at Yew Dell

For the past five years regional artists have submitted their finest works of garden art to the Yew Dell Botanical Gardens jury for selection

This year more than 23 artists will display 50 of their sculptures throughout the beautiful gardens and arboretum at Yew Dell.

This year's garden sculpture show features 10 new artists to the show and all three Oldham County High Schools.

Oldham County High School teacher Tammy Passafiume has encouraged her students to create pieces for the YDBG since the sculpture show's inception. Her students submit ideas and then discuss their concepts and the execution process.

This year's idea came from a Guatemalan student. His idea was inspired by the flower petal blankets that line the streets during Lent.

After several discussions his idea morphed into 5' x 40" piece composed of 410 individual tiles inspired by Georgia O'Keefe's "Poppies" in the style of Chuck Close.

All sculptures are for sale and a portion of the proceeds benefit YDBG, prices range from $125-$25,000.

The show will be on YDBG grounds May 18 – July 29. The exhibit is free with regular admission.

Click it or ticket campaign starts Sunday

La Grange Police Department to participate in national seat belt enforcement campaign

If you or someone you know refuse to wear a seat belt – beware. Local police are looking for you.

The 2012 National Click It or Ticket seat belt enforcement campaign kicks off May 20. La Grange Police Department is joining with other state and local law enforcement officers and highway safety advocates across the country to help save more lives by strongly enforcing seat belt laws around the clock.

“Too many drivers and passengers on the road at night are not wearing their seat belts, and it all too often ends in tragedy,” said La Grange Police Officer Jo Wakefield. “Our goal is to save more lives, so La Grange Police Department will be out enforcing seat belt laws — day and night.”

While seat belt use is at a record high of 84 percent nationwide, Kentucky lags behind with an 82 percent usage rate.

There were 721 total highway fatalities in Kentucky in 2011, with 576 killed in motor vehicles.

Of those 576 fatalities, 58.7 percent were not wearing a seat belt.

Even though this year’s Click It or Ticket enforcement mobilization runs through Memorial Day weekend, motorists should know that officers are out enforcing seat belt laws year-round.

“Those who choose not to wear a seat belt will be stopped and cited by our officers who will be out cracking down on Click It or Ticket violators. Motorists should buckle up every time they go out,” Wakefield said. “Our officers are prepared to ticket anyone not buckled up – no warnings and no excuses.”

MEMORIAL SERVICE WILL HONOR TEEN CRASH VICTIMS

A memorial service Sunday will honor the memory of teens who died in motor vehicle crashes in 2011.

Members of Mt. Tabor United Methodist Church in Centerfield will place a cross in front of the church for each teen who died in an auto crash last year.

In 2011, 49 teenagers died in Kentucky crashes.

The memorial service takes place at 11:45 a.m. Sunday, following regular church services.

A bagpipe player will perform a tribute.

North Oldham High School Student Haley Howard will place a black and teal ribbon — the school’s colors — on one cross to honor another NOHS student.

In July, NOHS graduate John Powell died in a car crash on U.S. 42, just weeks after earning his diploma from North Oldham.

Howard said Powell’s death motivated her to develop Project Horsepower, a series of interactive events designed to raise student awareness about safe driving.

Law enforcement officials from local agencies will also attend.

Rogers, Juanitta Fern (Dillard), 89, died May 5, 2012 of natural causes.

Born 4/12/23 in Ark. to James W & Elsie Dillard. Married William H. Rogers 6/8/40 who passed 4/1/11.

Survived by 5 children, Evelyn (Bob) Coon, Buster (Barbara) Rogers, Joyce Forillo, Linda (Fred) Depaola, and John Rogers. Also survived by 9 grandchildren and 15 great grandchildren.

She was a member of the Eastern Star. She loved sewing & made beautiful hand-made quilts and clothes. Their home gardens were a showcase of trees & flowers and they took pride of their 'plate size' hibiscus. Father's vegetable gardens were artwork. Voracious readers, they kept the public library busy. She was also a great southern cook. (We're going to miss your fried okra, cornbread dressing and strawberry/rhubarb cobbler.)

Juanitta had a beautiful thimble collection mostly gifted from her children & grandchildren, with thimbles from around the world which she bequeathed to her granddaughter Kimberly.

She was a good, loving mother & will be deeply missed, but we know our dad was sitting up by the Gate waiting for her. After 70+ years of marriage, he will be happy to have her back. Godspeed, Mom.

Relay for Life

More than 25 teams participated in Oldham County's 2012 Relay for Life. Teams from local schools, businesses and organizations raised nearly $56,000 for the American Cancer Society. The event celebrates cancer survivors while honoring those who died from the disease.

Students from this year's host school, North Oldham High, paid tribute to teacher Will Jones, who died in March. The overnight event began at 7 p.m. Friday and ended Saturday morning.

Runners from all over the state gather to compete in Dream Mile, Luke Weishaar finishes 9th

BY TRACY HARRIS
STAFF WRITER, THE OLDHAM ERA

The elite Dream Mile event brought together the state's top runners May 4 at St. Xavier in Louisville.

The Dream Mile features just two races, the mile for both men and women. Students must meet qualifying standards to participate.

Standards are 4:25 in the 1600-meter run or 4:27 in the mile for men; 5:20 in the 1600-meter run or 5:22 in the mile for women.

The race is designed to produce fast times, with a competitive field, quality track and even a pacer for the first two laps.

Students are also recognized on the field before the race, making it feel like a championship event.

The men's field of 15 included two Oldham County students, Luke Weishaar of Oldham County High and Taylor Sanders of North Oldham High.

Holy Cross's Jacob Thompson won the race although Butler's Patrick Gregory stayed close by until the end. A second Butler runner, Tretz Kinnaird, also stayed in the lead pack. Kinnaird set a new state record in the 800 meter earlier this season.

Thompson (4:13.43), Gregory (4:14.73) and Kinnaird (4:15.97) took the top three spots and all broke last year's meet record of

JUST A BIT OUTSIDE

Sports Editor, The Oldham Era

The short road home

Sometimes saying hello can be just as hard as saying goodbye. Other times though, it can be harder. A couple of wasted hours and plenty of discarded paragraphs later, I can certainly testify to that. Still, for all the things that won't seem to fit into words, one that will is how excited I am to be here.

First and foremost, I really can't thank The Oldham Era enough for taking a chance on me and allowing such a great opportunity. Being handed the reins to an award-winning section is a very humbling experience and one that I certainly don't take lightly. I look forward to giving this job all that I have and hope to do just as good a job as my predecessor, Jason Stamm.

I also want to thank my new co-workers, who have made me feel more welcome than I deserve in my short time at the paper. I look forward to getting to know each of you better and building good friendships over the next few years (cough and the occasional kickball game or two cough)

Overall though, I'm just excited to get this journey started and see where it takes me. I've heard so many great things about this community and look forward to immersing myself in it. I'll try my best to get out there and meet as many people as possible, but please don't hesitate to come say hello if you see me out and about. I would love to hear any ideas you have or just to shoot the breeze if the opportunity presents itself.

I also want to take the time to thank the Murray Ledger & Times and both Calloway County and Murray High Schools for helping prepare me for this opportunity, especially Ms. Alice and Ricky. I had some wonderful memories in my short time as the assistant sports editor and will always look fondly on my time there. I really do consider Murray as much as a home to me as Louisville and wish you guys nothing but the best in the future.

I'll be rooting for you in the postseason just as long as you don't play any Oldham County teams. Hopefully, if that problem does present itself, it will have the courtesy to wait until deep in the state tournament.

Moving on though, I guess this is the part of the column where I talk a little bit about myself and my background. Well, get comfortable because this might take a little while.

First of all, I just want to reassure you that I am one of you. Though I didn't grow up in Oldham County, I have called the great city of Louisville home for the last 22 years of my life, growing up on the other end of the Gene Snyder in the wonderful little redneck community of Valley Station (I say that lovingly).

Still, as a result of being separated by two regions, I only remember playing the Oldham schools once during high school — North Oldham put a hurting on my alma mater, Beth Haven, in boys' basketball my senior year — so I do want to go on the record and say that I don't have any biases toward any of the schools.

Other than that though, I'm also a huge Kentucky fan that is absolutely ecstatic to be working for the same company as The Cats' Pause; enjoys rooting for the Dallas Cowboys, the Atlanta Braves and Chipper Jones; and is addicted to Friday Night Lights, Kentucky Sports Radio and Seinfeld. I'm also really glad to get this introduction column out of the way because of how awkward it inherently is.

All that said, overall, sports is my passion and I do feel more than blessed to get the chance to serve you as the sports editor. I hope you're looking forward to this as much as I am.

Tithing brings spiritual benefits

I hope you have enjoyed this series on the spiritual disciplines of faith.

Whether you are practicing such spiritual disciplines as worship, prayer, and Bible study, regularly or not, most people recognize how vitally important to a growing faith these disciplines are. But tithing seems more painful than most folks can bear.

Tithing is the giving away of 10 percent of one's income to the Lord through the ministries of Christ's church.

In Leviticus 27:30 we read, "All tithes from the land, whether the seed from the ground or the fruit from the tree, are the Lord's; they are holy to the Lord."

Tithing is simple to understand, and frightening for many to even consider doing.

Yet, to tithe one's income to the Lord can have an immediate and dramatic effect on one's life.

The few people who answer God's call will attest to the truth of that last statement, but few people will ever trust God enough to let God provide for them when they think their tithe will cost more than they can afford.

AL EARLEY
From a Religious Point of View

They are convinced that tithing will be anything less than painful denial of life's necessities or even bankruptcy.

It is not easy to tithe and it does mean a person must give up some things that they would rather not, but I can say, without any hesitation, that the benefits of tithing are some of the greatest benefits one can experience in the spiritual disciplines of faith.

Some of those benefits include an incredible freedom from worshipping the most seductive idol in our culture — money.

Another benefit is gaining new insight into what is important in life guided by faith rather than materialism.

There is also the satisfaction of seeing your money used to change lives, and thus be involved in the worthy work of God.

And, you learn to trust in God instead of yourself to take care of your needs.

You also see the miracle that before you tithe, there never seems to be enough money, while after you tithe your needs are always met.

These are a few of the benefits I have experienced over the years.

Norman Vincent Peale once wrote that he met many people over the years who had given money to churches and benevolent organizations but would quit giving for any number of reasons.

But in his whole ministry he had never met a person who tithed who ever stopped tithing. Never!

That was an insight that helped to convince me to tithe a long time ago. I can't ever imagine quitting, no matter what may happen in my church or in my life.

But don't take my word for it. See if you can find a tither or two, and ask them if there are any circumstances which would cause them to ever quit tithing.

I feel safe in saying I know what the answer is. But try it anyway. Go ahead, I dare you! You may encounter a witness of faith that will change your life.

Like all the spiritual disciplines they are not a means to salvation themselves.

The Pharisees were known to be strict tithers, and Jesus struggled mightily with their self-centeredness and self-righteousness.

These spiritual disciplines are practiced to open us up to God's will, and deepen our faith in Jesus Christ as lord and savior.

Have you ever experienced any benefits to giving your money away? Have you ever considered tithing? What is your greatest barrier to tithing?

I hope you will make a commitment to tithing so that you will better understand how you can trust God completely with your life.

Al Earley is pastor of La Grange Presbyterian Church. The views in this column are those of the writer.

Students earn 35 state Reflections awards

Two students, a kindergartner and a fifth-grader, considered for national Reflections competition

BY TRACY HARRIS
STAFF WRITER, THE OLDHAM ERA

Oldham County students earned 35 state awards from the PTA Reflections with two students moving on to national competition.

Students competed in literature, photography, visual arts, dance choreography, film production and musical composition. A district competition determined which entries qualified for state competition.

Top entries are awarded either awards of excellence, the highest honor, or awards of merit.

At the state level, Olivia Wood and Colin Clevenger took top honors in their divisions and were considered for national awards.

Wood, a fifth grader at Goshen Elementary, won in the dance choreography category. Clevenger, a Camden Station kindergartner, won in musical composition.

Eleven students received the Christa McAuliffe Rising Star Award, given to students who have faced challenges at school or at home and have improved their grades, character or self-esteem. Local PTA organizations nominated students for the Rising Star award.

East Oldham Middle student Vincenzo Bianco received an award for an essay promoting self-esteem.

The state awards celebration is Saturday in Lexington.

The national PTA announced its winners May 8. No Oldham County students received honors from the national contest — only seven Kentucky students received recognition.

Last year three Kentucky students earned awards of merit at the national level, the second-highest award given.

That included Buckner Elementary student Makenna Brizendine, who earned the award for photography. And in 2010, South Oldham High student Emeran Irby earned an award of merit for film production.
